July Dates

June has left us just half a year to go before 2022. July, the center of summer, is upon us. For some, it is the half way point of classes. For others, you've just gotten started. The beginning of July begins what we call, The Dog Days of Summer. When people say that, it means we're in the hottest time of summer. It comes from the idea that Sirius, also known as the "Dog Star," rises at the same time as the sun from July 3 -August 11.

July is known as an unlucky month for weddings. More understandably, June is Ice Cream month.

July 2nd is, I Forgot Day: I'm surprised any one remembered, though. If you got married on July 2nd, and you forgot your anniversary, it would help explain why getting married in July is considered unlucky. July 3rd is Disobedience Day, but you don't have to celebrate it.

July 4th is Independence Day here in America. It is often referred to simply as the 4th of July. This is a federal holiday, the "birthday of America," and a big deal for most Americans. We commemorate The Declaration of Independence from Great Britain in 1776. Americans decided that they wanted to rule themselves and not be a colony of England any more. It was a dangerous thing to do because the men who signed the declaration could have been arrested and killed for treason.

The 4th of July falls on a Sunday this year, and so we get Monday off. There may be a Fourth of July parade in your town and public fireworks at a park near you just after sunset.

The 4th is also Sidewalk Frying Egg day. The idea is that because the sun is so strong on the fourth of July, that sidewalks get hot enough to fry an egg on them. 'Never tried, but feel free. I would imagine that the eggs would be sort of gritty.

During July, lots of fruits ripen and are picked. So, there are celebration days for cherries, apples, strawberries, blueberries, peaches, avocados, and raspberries.

July 17th is National Peach Day. Go to Fredericksburg, TX. for the full effect.

July 31 is Watermelon Day. What a great way to end the most summery of months.

Catch the last bit of summer!
